South Australia. A brilliant blend.

Adelaide sure knows how to put on a festival and after successfully hosting the 10th Australian Masters Games in October 2005, Adelaide is set to go one bigger by hosting the inaugural Australasian Masters Games from 5-14 October, 2007.

With a population of 1.2 million people, Adelaide is the cultural, political and social centre of South Australia. More than 70 percent of South Australia's population lives in Adelaide, and it's easy to see why: Adelaide boasts a pleasant Mediterranean climate; great shopping and cultural attractions; a brilliant blend of wining and dining options; and a jam-packed festivals and events calendar.

The city is conveniently located close to all of the state's most recognised tourism regions including the Barossa, Kangaroo Island, Fleurieu Peninsula and Adelaide Hills. Within an hour are some of the best wineries in Australia, golf courses and world-renowned natural attractions.

Minutes from the city, the Adelaide Hills are dotted with vineyards and small farms which generate some of South Australia's finest produce. Quaint townships, cellar doors, Cleland National Park and the National Motor Museum at Birdwood are other key attractions.

The Barossa (just an hour's drive from Adelaide) is Australia's richest and best-known wine region. Premium wines, five-star restaurants and cellar doors abound among the vineyards and undulating hills.

Located an hour south of Adelaide, the Fleurieu Peninsula is a dramatic mix of cliffscapes, surf and pristine beaches. Its soils and climate produce great food and wines, while the southern coastal towns of Victor Harbor and Goolwa are two of the State's most popular seaside holiday destinations.

The third largest island off the coast of Australia, Kangaroo Island is a natural wonderland. It's a place where visitors can wander along coastlines scattered with sleeping seals, watch fairy penguins scamper up the beach or visit wildlife reserves brimming with kangaroos, wallabies, koalas and emus.

The Flinders Ranges and Outback is the largest region in South Australia. About 85 percent of the world's opals are produced around Coober Pedy, a town in the north of South Australia, while further south are the natural wonders of the Flinders Ranges and Wilpena Pound.

The Clare Valley is characterised by classic farmland with pockets of pristine bushland and wine country. The 25-kilometre Riesling Trail from Clare to Auburn provides a unique way of walking or cycling between boutique wineries and cellar doors.

The Eyre Peninsula and its rugged West Coast offers spectacular scenery and is the gateway to the Nullarbor Plain. The Head of Bight is one of the best locations in the world for watching Southern Right Whales and their young.

The Yorke Peninsula is a fishing haven, offering bountiful catches of King George whiting, snapper, salmon and squid. It's also home to some of the country's premier surf beaches.

The Limestone Coast is home to Mount Gambier's mysterious Blue Lake, the World Heritage-listed Naracoorte Caves and the awarded Coonawarra wine region.

One of the world's great rivers, the Murray River, dominates the beautiful and diverse Riverland region. Further south in the Murraylands the Murray River winds its way from Swan Reach to the spectacular Coorong, where visitors can explore the lakes and their prolific bird life and spectacular flora.

Australia's largest multisport festival just got bigger...

Get ready as Australia's largest multisport festival returns to Adelaide next October bigger, bolder and better than ever!

Following the successful staging of the 10th Australian Masters Games in October 2005, Adelaide will host the 1st Australasian Masters Games from 5-14 October 2007. That's right! The Games have hit the big time – now expanding to include the Asia Pacific region. You can again expect a fantastic sports program, first class entertainment and an enviable social calendar.

For those who are yet to experience the Australian Masters Games phenomenon, the event is a biennial multisport festival providing an opportunity for people over the age of 30 years to participate in the sport(s) of their choice regardless of background or ability.

The Games have no entry qualification and encourage lifelong participation in sport. Adelaide will again attract over 10,000 participants, who will take part in 50+ sports over the ten day period. While the competition is important one of the key attractions of the Games is the social interaction and spirit of camaraderie experienced by participants.

So, come and join participants from Australia, Oceania and the Asia Pacific region in a celebration of mature age sport and go 'head to head' in the international arena.
